This YLS community e-newsletter aims to help you navigate events and opportunities relating to international, transnational, foreign, and comparative law.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Recognizing that we are in the midst of the COVID-19 epidemic, this is likely the last international law newsletter for the semester as there will be no Yale Law or Yale University international events or conferences to share. Below we are circulating the ongoing opportunities (subject of course to international travel restrictions) as well as our job and internship guide. We wish you all good health where ever you are and look forward to welcoming you back this coming Fall.

Should you be thinking about summer and post-graduate fellowships as well as jobs, we want to draw your attention to a factsheet, available through the YLS landing page of International Law, at the "Career Planning and Fellowships" tile. It is CAS password protected and may be accessed here.

GRANTS AND FELLOWSHIPS

Funding for International Research - Summer Recess Deadline: Suspended Until Further Notice

The Streicker Fund for Student Research provides support for academic projects requiring international travel. Examples include field research, in-country interviews with relevant stakeholders, and archival research. Research trips are typically conducted during extended academic recesses (e.g., summer or winter break).

The Oscar M. Ruebhausen Fund for student domestic research projects provides support for students to engage in domestic research and pursue academic inquiry and discourse. This fund is part of the larger Oscar M. Ruebhausen Fund.

For writing and publishing opportunities, check out the YLS Student Activities Resources site.
