The Orville H. Schell, Jr. Center for International Human Rights

KIRBY SIMON SUMMER HUMAN RIGHTS FELLOWSHIPS
SUPPORTED BY THE ROBINA FOUNDATION

The Orville H. Schell, Jr. Center for International Human Rights provides Kirby Simon Fellowships to enable students to spend all or part of the summer doing international human rights work abroad or in the United States. The Fellowship allows Yale students with an interest in human rights to gain practical experience in the field, undertake independent research on human rights topics, or have an intensive learning experience on a human rights issue of interest to them. At the same time, Summer Fellows contribute – through advocacy or scholarship – to the work and development of the international human rights movement.

Summer Fellows must work at least six weeks for an organization or on an independent project dedicated to promoting human rights. Students may split the summer, but Summer Fellowships will, with few exceptions, cover travel to one work location only.

Summer Fellows participate in an orientation in the spring before their fellowship begins. After completion of their summer, Fellows submit a written report and attend a gathering to share their experiences with each other. Returned Summer Fellows also participate in a number of events that allow them to discuss with the Yale community the issues raised by and the insights gained from their fellowship experiences.

All Yale students are eligible to apply for a Kirby Simon Summer Fellowship.

- First- and second-year law students are eligible for funding to cover both living and travel expenses. This single application to the Schell Center covers both sources. Law students who wish to receive both the travel grant and living expenses do not need to submit a separate SPIF application (SPIF Part II). They must, however, complete Part I of the SPIF application (the Financial Aid Office will provide information about this step during the fall semester).
- Please note that law students may receive no more than a total of 12 weeks’ summer living support from all law school sources. You may split the summer between human rights work and domestic public interest work, and you may participate in the South American Linkage program, but you will be able to receive only 12 weeks of support in total for these activities.
- Graduating law students may be eligible for the travel grants but are not eligible for the living stipend.
- Non-law students are eligible for funding to cover travel expenses only.
- First- and second-year law students who have not previously received Summer Fellowships have priority in funding decisions.
- Students not eligible for SPIF may be eligible for the travel grant.

Applications for summer 2018 are due Wednesday, March 21. See the Schell Center website for application form. Before submitting your application, you must meet with Jim Silk or Hope Metcalf. Please use the office hours application on the Inside Page to schedule appointments. If you cannot meet during their scheduled hours, please email barbara.mianzo@yale.edu to arrange another time.

Everyone must submit an application to humanrightsfellows@yale.edu by Wednesday, March 21. If you have not confirmed your summer plans by this date, please submit an application providing tentative information about the plans you think are most likely (or that you are most interested in). We need everyone considering a Kirby Simon Summer Fellowship to provide this information by March 21 so that we have an estimate of the funding we will need. You may amend your application up to the end of classes on April 23. If you are unable to finalize your plans by that date, please contact the Schell Center.

Funding Information

Travel: Your travel grant will be based on the region of your destination. The amount for each region should be adequate to cover your round-trip travel from New York to your fellowship site. It is not designed to include internal travel within the country during the period of your fellowship. If the cost of traveling to and from your fellowship site significantly exceeds the amount set for your region, you may request consideration of an adjustment to your grant.

Travel-Related Medications/Inoculations: You will receive separate reimbursement for all required inoculations and preventative medications (does not include regular medication unrelated to preventative requirements for your fellowship site). All receipts should be submitted before you leave for your fellowship and must show the type of medication or inoculation received. The Schell Center will cover a maximum of $600 for required preventative inoculations and medications.

Visas: You must determine whether you need a visa for your destination or destinations. The following State Department link is a good starting point for information about visa requirements: http://www.state.gov/travel. We do not provide additional funding for visas.

Living Stipend (SPIF): The living stipend portion of the Kirby Simon Fellowship is the equivalent of the SPIF weekly stipend. Grants for living expenses will be $625 per week for a maximum of 12 weeks.
